PREFACE

In 1961, the University of Illinois Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations published Labor History in the United States: A General Bibliography by Gene S. Stroud and Gilbert E. Donahue as the sixth in its Bibliographic Contributions Series. This reference tool, restricted primarily to books, incorporated some articles which appeared in special or topical issues of journals, anthologies, and encyclopedias but was limited necessarily to partial coverage of these sources of labor history. American Labor in Journals of History: A Bibliography is intended to supplement the Stroud and Donahue work in one important area.

Although well known to professional historians, the numerous local, state, regional, and subject history journals have often escaped the attention of the more specialized student of labor and industrial relations. In addition to the primary purpose of furnishing a comprehensive bibliography of articles related to labor history, the present study serves to indicate the need for additional investigations in many areas and to direct scholars to an extensive publishing outlet for their efforts. The emergence of Labor History has proved to be a welcome addition to the field but by no means pre-empts it.

In setting preliminary standards it was decided to limit the list of journals to be searched to those published in the United States. Complete runs of one hundred forty-eight periodicals were examined and ninety-eight of these contained articles suitable for inclusion in the bibliography. The compiler did not rely on indexes but actually examined the contents of every issue of every periodical included in the study through December, 1960. A separate appendix contains in alphabetical order the names of journals also searched but which produced no entries.

The 1961 edition of the Directory of Historical Societies in the United States and Canada was helpful in identification of currently published journals. Older, no-longer published periodicals were utilized whenever full runs could be obtained.

No claim is made that the journal list is exhaustive. Conspicuously absent are numerous smaller publications issued by local and county historical societies and by some religious and ethnic groups. The great difficulty in locating complete sets of this type of journal, many of which have been issued irregularly or for only brief periods of time, outweighed their usefulness. Furthermore, it seemed unlikely that most users of this bibliography would be in a better position to obtain them.

Journals of history published by religious denominations were included when available as were those issued by and for various ethnic groups. Although some of the ethnic group publications tended to be of a semipopular nature, they sometimes contained articles valuable to an understanding of the background of groups important in the American labor movement. Ethnic group articles in strictly historical journals were selected on this same premise and were omitted only when, in the judgment of the compiler there was no relationship, direct or indirect, to the labor subject.

A wide variation in the caliber of the journals is apparent. All of the general and regional journals and many of those published under state and local auspices are devoted to serious and scholarly articles. Wherever public funds are available in ample amounts, quality is usually, but not invariably, better. In some instances editorial policies and other considerations have compelled a journal to retain an outdated, antiquarian approach once typical of many of the more modern journals as well.

Alaska, Hawaii, Maine, Massachusetts, and South Dakota presently are not favored with journals of history on the state level. Connecticut is represented only by a bulletin and New Hampshire by an irregularly issued periodical which recently has not produced a volume a year. Several other states are struggling to establish periodicals which have been in existence only a few years.

In order that industrial Massachusetts, which like Maine and the other New England states claims some attention in the excellent New England Quarterly, be directly represented, the Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society has been admitted to the bibliography. This venerable publication, never much concerned with labor history, now appears at irregular intervals in hard binding. Volume 72 embracing proceedings from October, 1957, to May, 1960, will not be issued until late in 1963 and could not be included. A preliminary report on tentative editorial plans did not disclose any forthcoming labor articles.

Articles chosen for inclusion in the bibliography were restricted to those dealing with labor in the United States and its possessions or with American labor in other countries. Those dealing with the trade union movement in Germany or with striking coal miners in Wales, for example, were not cited unless the author stressed some direct connection with the American labor movement.

Articles concerning slavery posed a special problem. American historians have given considerable attention to this subject, a condition reflected in the number of entries dealing with it. Careful selectivity was employed in including pieces touching on slavery, and decisions were often necessarily arbitrary. Since titles are frequently misleading, content was made the determining factor. Most articles treating abolition, politics and slavery, the slave trade, etc., were rejected. Articles covering the economics of slavery, working conditions under slavery, etc., were retained. In indexing, slavery articles restricted to a particular state or region were entered under the appropriate subheadings, but the number of entries under the general heading of slavery remains large. As might be expected, journals in agrarian southern states with relatively recent industrialization have been preoccupied with the slavery issue.

Journals appear in the bibliography under 1960 titles in alphabetical order. Title changes and the names of predecessor journals in a direct line of descent are indicated in the heading along with the 1960 publisher and the inclusive dates of publication. Articles are listed under each periodical in the chronological order of their appearance.

A Subject Index has been prepared to increase the usefulness of the bibliography. Articles are numbered consecutively, totaling 903 entries in all. Each subject entry is followed by the numbers of the articles pertinent to it. Wherever possible, each article is indexed under category of workers, name of specific union, city or state, persons, etc. Each article is limited to a maximum of five index entries, a rule violated in only three or four special cases. The great majority are indexed under less than five entries. Here again many arbitrary decisions were necessary. All casual references to persons, unions, concepts, and events are not indexed. The name of Samuel Gompers, for instance, appears in many articles but index entries are made only for those in which he is given special attention. On the other hand, William Z. Foster is given an entry for the only article in which his name appears, although the relative emphasis given him might not warrant a separate entry otherwise. To some extent the length and content of the article itself determines the index entries. Occasionally entries have been made in the case of brief general essays which would have been omitted in longer, more comprehensive studies. Liberal use has been made of double entries and cross references.

A separate Picture Index follows the same pattern of numerical entries under alphabetically arranged subject headings.

Results of this bibliographical study suggest that labor and industrial relations history remains a relatively untapped resource in some states, including some important industrial ones. Some state journals have published no labor history articles; others have devoted surprisingly little space to the subject. With but few exceptions it was not until the depression of the 1930's that studies of more than a superficial nature began to appear.

Many persons contributed to the preparation of this bibliography. Chairmen of the Institute Library Committee, Professors Milton Derber (1961) and Adolf Sturmthal (1962), provided encouragement and support in the initial stages of planning. Professors William Howard Huff, Thomas Edward Ratcliffe, Jr., and Mr. Frank Rodgers of the University Library gave valuable assistance in obtaining many of the necessary materials. Mrs. Darlene Feurer typed and checked the text and indexes. Professor Barbara D. Dennis furnished editorial advice and supervision during the final stages of preparation.

A special debt is owed to Professor Archie Green who suggested the project and without whose generously contributed time, information, judgments, and advice the work could scarcely have been completed.

In a study of the bibliography under 1960 it has been found that of the 110 titles listed, 60 are of primary concern to the field of research in the history of the book and 50 are of general interest to the history of the book.

A special issue has been prepared to increase the amount of information available on the history of the book. The articles are arranged in two sections: the first section contains articles on the history of the book in general, and the second section contains articles on the history of the book in particular. The first section contains articles on the history of the book in general, and the second section contains articles on the history of the book in particular. The first section contains articles on the history of the book in general, and the second section contains articles on the history of the book in particular.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

1776. The Declaration of Independence was adopted on July 4th, 1776, at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia. This act declared the thirteen American colonies to be free and independent states, absolving them of all allegiance to the British Crown.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

1787. The Constitution of the United States was drafted by the Framers in 1787 and ratified by the states in 1788. It established a federal government with three branches: the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial.

1791. The Bill of Rights, the first ten amendments to the Constitution, were adopted in 1791. These amendments guaranteed the rights of the individual citizens and limited the power of the federal government.

1800. The War of 1812 was fought between the United States and Great Britain from 1812 to 1815. The war resulted in the Treaty of Ghent, which restored the status quo ante bellum.

1820. The Missouri Compromise of 1820 was a legislative agreement that admitted Missouri as a slave state and Maine as a free state to the Union. It also prohibited slavery in the remaining territories of the Louisiana Purchase.

1861-1865. The American Civil War was fought between the Union and the Confederate States of America from 1861 to 1865. The war ended with the Union's victory and the abolition of slavery.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

1865-1877. The Reconstruction era followed the Civil War, during which the federal government sought to rebuild the South and integrate African Americans into the political and social life of the nation.

1877-1900. The Gilded Age was a period of rapid industrialization and economic growth in the United States, characterized by the accumulation of vast fortunes by a few individuals.

1900-1918. The Progressive Era was a period of social and political reform in the United States, during which many states and the federal government enacted laws to address social problems.

1918-1945. World War I was fought between the Allies and the Central Powers from 1914 to 1918. The United States entered the war in 1917 and played a significant role in the Allied victory.

1945-1991. World War II was fought between the Allies and the Axis Powers from 1939 to 1945. The United States entered the war in 1941 and played a crucial role in the Allied victory.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

CHAPTER I. THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA. 1492-1498.

In the year 1492, Christopher Columbus, an Italian navigator, sailed from Spain in search of a westward route to the Indies. He discovered the continent of America on October 12, 1492.

At the time of his discovery, the continent was inhabited by various tribes of Indians. Columbus named the continent "America" in honor of Amerigo Vesputi, an Italian explorer who had sailed with him.

The discovery of America opened up a new world of trade and commerce. It led to the establishment of colonies and the growth of the United States.

The first European settlement in America was established by the Spaniards in 1493. It was named San Salvador.

The English first discovered America in 1482, when John Cabot sailed from England in search of a westward route to the Indies.

The first English settlement in America was established by the Pilgrims in 1620. It was named Plymouth.

The growth of the United States was rapid. By 1776, it had become an independent nation.

The United States has since become a great power, and its influence is felt throughout the world.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry should be supported by a valid receipt or invoice to ensure transparency and accountability.

2. In addition, it is crucial to review the accounts regularly to identify any discrepancies or errors. This process should be carried out on a monthly basis to prevent small mistakes from accumulating and affecting the overall financial health of the organization.

3. Furthermore, the document highlights the need for clear communication between all stakeholders involved in the financial process. Regular meetings and reports should be used to keep everyone informed of the current status and any potential risks.

4. It is also important to establish a strong internal control system to minimize the risk of fraud and mismanagement. This includes implementing strict policies regarding access to funds and ensuring that all employees understand their responsibilities in maintaining the integrity of the financial data.

5. Finally, the document concludes by stating that a proactive approach to financial management is essential for long-term success. By staying vigilant and addressing issues as they arise, the organization can ensure its financial stability and growth.

6. The following table provides a summary of the key points discussed in the document, along with the corresponding actions that should be taken to address each point.

7. It is recommended that these actions be implemented immediately to ensure the highest level of financial accuracy and security.

8. The document is intended to serve as a guide for all employees and management, and it is subject to periodic updates as the organization's needs and regulations evolve.

9. For more information or to request a copy of this document, please contact the Finance Department at [contact information].

10. The second part of the document provides a detailed overview of the company's financial performance over the past year. It includes a comprehensive analysis of the income statement, balance sheet, and cash flow statement, highlighting the key drivers of growth and the challenges faced during the period.

11. The income statement shows a steady increase in revenue, primarily driven by the expansion of our product line and the successful launch of our new services. However, there was a corresponding increase in operating expenses, which resulted in a narrower profit margin than anticipated.

12. On the balance sheet side, we have managed to maintain a strong level of liquidity, with cash and equivalents remaining at a healthy level. This is a result of our conservative approach to capital spending and our focus on improving operational efficiency.

13. The cash flow statement indicates that our operating activities generated a positive cash flow throughout the year, which is a positive sign for our long-term sustainability. However, there were some fluctuations in our investing and financing activities, reflecting our ongoing efforts to optimize our capital structure.

14. Overall, the financial performance of the company has been solid, with a clear focus on driving growth and maintaining financial discipline. The challenges we have faced have not deterred us from our strategic goals, and we are confident in our ability to continue to build a strong and profitable organization in the coming years.

15. The following table provides a summary of the key financial metrics for the year, along with the corresponding actions that should be taken to address each point.

16. It is recommended that these actions be implemented immediately to ensure the highest level of financial accuracy and security.

17. The document is intended to serve as a guide for all employees and management, and it is subject to periodic updates as the organization's needs and regulations evolve.
